Editorial Policy: Articulāte is designed to promote and recognize excellence in critical writing among Denison English majors and minors. A joint student and faculty journal, Articulāte is published in the Spring semester and features student essays of literary and cultural criticism. Articulāte will consider papers written by Denison undergraduates in any area of literary and cultural criticism. While the journal is designed primarily for the critical writing of English majors and minors, all submissions of high quality will be carefully reviewed by the student editorial board. Also, faculty are encouraged to recommend particularly strong essays from their classes for publication in Articulāte. As a special feature, every year Articulāte will publish the essay that wins the Robert T. Wilson Award for Scholarly Writing.

Submissions should combine research with original insight and not exceed 15 typed, double-spaced pages. (However, if they are of exceptionally high quality, essays of greater length occasionally will be considered for publication.) Please use MLA parenthetical documentation. Initial submissions should be in hard copy only; if a piece is selected for publication, the author will be asked to submit on disk a specifically formatted electronic manuscript of her or his work. Please submit your essay with your Slayter box number only on it, not your name. The journal accepts submissions at any time during the academic year. Send your essay to:
